學校簡介
Introduction

The name Ewha University symbolizes traditions and the spirit of women's education in Korea. The name Ewha was first used for the school when Emperor Gojong bestowed 'Ewha Haktang' on a girls' school, run by Mrs. Scranton, in order to celebrate the start of women's education in Korea in 1887.

The first official use of the name Ewha was early in 1887, when Emperor Gojong bestowed the name 'Ewha Haktang' on a girls' school run by Mrs. Scranton, to celebrate the start of women's education in Korea. It has been suggested that Ewha was named after pear blossoms (梨花, in Chinese letters) that were scattered near the school or the name of a garden pavilion, Ewha-jung. While the different department of schools used independent academic curriculums, college courses and pre-medical courses were restructured as Ewha College in 1925. Eventually, the name Ewha Haktang was officially abolished in 1928.

The name Ewha is not limited to just the name of an educational institution, but also symbolizes the tradition and spirit of women's education in Korea. There is an element of cultural identity to the name because Ewha was forced to change its name twice under Japanese colonial rule; the first time to Ewha Women's College Youth Training Department in 1943 and the second time to Kyung-sung Women's College in 1945, because it was perceived that the name Ewha had a strong nationalistic connotation. In 1945, however, the original name was reinstated with Korea's liberation. Since then, the University has been known as Ewha Womans University.
