學校簡介 Introduction	At Osaka Institute of Technology, our mission is to develop specialists with science-based practical skills who play an important role in society for the world, for the people and for the community. Since OIT was founded more than 90 years ago, we have consistently striven to meet society's need for talented workers through thorough practical education, project-based learning, and partnerships with the wider academic and industrial community. We are proud of our contribution to Japan's social fabric and industrial advancement. Indeed, we see this as a tradition that must be passed down from generation to generation. In addition to the Faculties of Engineering, Information Science and Technology, and Intellectual Property, we have established a new undergraduate department in April 2017, the Faculty of Robotics and Design Engineering. The new department covers robotics from multiple perspectives, including artificial intelligence, and the Internet of Things, as well as spatial and product design. As a result of this comprehensive approach, we aim to produce talented graduates able to help society achieve the advances necessary to make robots an integral part of our everyday lives.
